

Dr. Tim Call received his MD from the University of Wisconsin in 1980 and then completed his internal medicine residency at Gundersen/Lutheran Medical Center, LaCrosse, WI. His hematology/oncology fellowship training was at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, MN. Following service in the US Navy Medical Corps, he was appointed to the staff of Mayo Clinic in 1997. Throughout his career at Mayo Clinic, he served as a clinician and educator. He also served as a section head in Hematology, head of the Mayo CLL disease interest group and Vice chair of Community Oncology. His research interests have included the epidemiology of CLL and lymphomas, familial CLL, clinical trials in CLL and hairy cell leukemia and provider/patient communication. He currently is an Emeritus Professor and supplemental consultant in the Division of Hematology, Department of Internal Medicine at Mayo Clinic.

